METAL DETECTORS

The World's Largest Manufacturer of Hobby Metal Detectors

About Us

We're Bounty Hunter – the world's largest designer and manufacturer of Hobby Metal Detectors, with products for every price range, interest level and channel of distribution.

Our electronics engineering efforts pioneered and reshaped the industry with the introduction of high-performance, low-cost ground balancing and discrimination technology.

From our first breakthrough discrimination patents two decades ago, to our newest digitized, microprocessor-controlled models, we have developed a complete line of the most user-friendly detectors, each handcrafted in the U.S.A.

Innovation and Diversity

Throughout our history, we have developed a diverse product line of innovative models that has established our company as a leader in the supply of Hobby Metal Detectors. Bounty Hunter has transformed treasure hunting and metal detecting from a specialized, highly technical endeavor into an easy-to-learn hobby, accessible to all ages and budgets.

From general treasure hunting, to side-recreation on weekend trips, to archeological studies and learning more about local history – Bounty Hunter metal detectors provide the means for a wholesome and rewarding hobby to share with friends and family.

Quality and Reliability

Our domestic manufacturing capabilities minimize inventory and maximize return on investment as we offer the shortest lead times in the industry.

Our time-sensitive make-to-order manufacturing ensures the same rapid delivery and high quality for the six-piece order as it does for the 1,000-piece order.

Our 5-year limited warranty and a field defect rate of only 0.04% make Bounty Hunter metal detectors the most trusted brand in outdoor adventure and entertainment offering the highest quality and value to our customers.

Bounty Hunter Metal Detectors

The Leader in Metal Detecting Technology

3

Each Bounty Hunter Metal Detector is an "induction balance" metal detector. Induction balance technology is the most popular professional metal detector technology in use today.

These are some common terms used throughout this catalog that may not be familiar to the metal detecting newcomer:

DISCRIMINATION

When the detector emits different tones for different types of metals, and when the detector "eliminates" certain metals, we refer to this as the detector "discriminating" among different types of metals.

RELIC

A relic is an object of interest by reason of its age or its association with the past. Many relics are made of iron, but can also be made of bronze or precious metals.

IRON

Iron is a common, low-grade metal that is often an undesirable target in certain metal detecting applications. Examples of undesirable iron objects are old cans, pipes, bolts, and nails.

Sometimes, the desired target is made of iron. Property markers, for instance, contain iron. Valuable relics can also be composed of iron; cannon balls, old armaments, and parts of old structures and vehicles can also be composed of iron.

GROUND BALANCE

Ground Balancing is the ability of the detector to ignore, or "see through," the earth's naturally occurring minerals. When "ground balanced", the detector can differentiate between the metallic content of the soil, and buried metal objects. Professional metal detectors, like your Bounty Hunter, have the ability to ground balance in many different types of soils.

WATERPROOF

The search coil can be submerged in water. The control housing and cable-to-housing connection must, however, stay dry.

COINSHOOTING

Finding buried coins is the most popular metal detecting application. The most valuable are very old.

CACHE HUNTING

Pronounced "cash". A cache is a buried or hidden valuable stored inside a case, strongbox, or bag.
